Re: Mrs Marian Hughes, age 90, city centre, CF10

Summary of visit and concerns:

Mrs Hughes is a 90-year-old lady with severe vascular dementia, referred by her GP following a welfare check. She lives alone and is a wheelchair user. She was recently discharged from hospital after a fall and a chest infection with no package of care in place, which the discharge team flagged as a concern.

The ward nursing record documented that she required full assistance with all care during her admission. On my home visit I found Mrs Hughes cold, unkempt, and with very little food in the house. She was disoriented and could not reliably tell me what day it was. No family contact is currently known.

This is a high-risk, safeguarding-level situation. Risks include falls, self-neglect, malnutrition and social isolation. I do not consider it safe for Mrs Hughes to remain at home without urgent, intensive support, and residential care may need to be considered. I am requesting an urgent crisis response and a full reassessment of her long-term care needs.
